Green transportation is becoming popular in many vocational schools in Hunan. At Xingcheng Vocational School, students talk about how to get to school in a cleaner and safer way. Some students live near the school, so they walk or ride shared bikes every morning. They think these ways are healthy and cheap. The school also puts a map near the front gate to show safe walking routes.

For students who live far away, the subway and buses are good choices. The subway station is only five minutes away from the school gate. During rush hour, the subway is faster than a taxi because it does not get stuck in heavy traffic. Buses cost less, and there are three bus stops near the school. Students can choose different bus lines according to their home addresses.

The school encourages students to plan their trips before leaving home. They can check a map app, compare time and cost, and choose a proper way. Teachers also remind students to be polite when asking for directions. If a student cannot find the right way, he or she should say “Excuse me” first and say “Thank you” at the end. In this way, students learn not only transportation knowledge but also good manners.
